SCIENCEVILLE HI OPPOSES SALEM IN SEMI-FINALS

Quakers Tounce Chaney for Third Straight
Tourney Victory

SIDINGER, MCLOSKEY
STAR IN 31-22 WIN

Victors in Battles This Afternoon to Clash in Finals Tonight

Flashing their real strength for the first time since the tournament opened, Salem High basketballers easily vanquished Youngstown Chaney, 31-22, in quarter-finals of the Northeastern Ohio district competition at Youngstown East's gymnasium-auditorium Friday night.

The big feature of the fracas, only spasmodically interesting, was the improved play of the Red and Black quintet which, by virtue of its victory, advanced into semi-finals and this afternoon will oppose the 1933 championship Scienceville five.

Scienceville Beats Hubbard
Scienceville, trounced by a 31-20 score by Salem in a regular season fray, showed great power in triumphing over a strong Hubbard varsity aggregation, 32-22, last night, and, in spite of the Quakers' previous decision over the defendants, the result of this afternoon's tussle is a matter that will be decided only after the final whistle and not by any pre-game dope.

Two other Youngstown schools, Rayen and South, will collide in today's second semi-final battle. Rayen marched through Sebring with ease after a hard-fought first half while the Southmen took over Newton Falls, 36 to 28.

The Salem-Scienceville fray is slated at 2 with Rayen and South colliding at 2:50, according to Harley Littler, manager of the tourney.

Finals At 8:30 Tonight
The winners of the afternoon contests will clash for the championship in finals at 8:30 tonight. Side losers meet in a consolation game at 7:30. Three teams, the champion, runner-up and consolation winner, will go to Akron next week.

Hard pressed in the first quarter as Chaney displayed a fine defense

Murdered Czar's Niece in "Rasputin" Suit

The innermost secrets of the Russian court in the last days of Czar Nicholas and the tremendous power wielded by Rasputin, the "Mad Monk" constitute the drama that began to unfold in a dingy London courtroom as the suit of Princess Irina Alexandrovna (Princess Youssevoff), came up for hearing. The Princess is seeking $2,000,000 from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures, Ltd., of London, for damages she charges her character sustained as the result of the film "Rasputin and the Empress." She claims the "Princess Natasha," played by Diana Wynyard, was intended to portray her. As "Natasha" is shown objectionably linked with Rasputin, played by Lionel Barrymore, in the film, the princess considers herself libeled. Sir Patrick Hastings, one of England's most brilliant lawyers, is counsel for the princess. His star witness was Prince Youssevoff, self-confessed assassin of Rasputin.

HOTEL FLAMES FATAL TO FIVE

Worcester, Mass., Structure Razed With Loss of $100,000

WORCESTER, Mass., March 3.—Five men were burned to death, and a dozen people injured in a fire which destroyed the Hotel Pleasant this morning with a loss of $100,000.

The dead: William Donovan, 86, Albert F. Gaudette, a partial cripple, Edward F. O'Brien, 43, George Rowe, 60, of Providence, R. I.

One unidentified man.

At least ten persons were rescued by firemen or escaped down rope fire escapes.

They were carried down swaying ladders while other victims leaped from windows screaming for their turn.

The fire, started in an elevator well, for a time it menaced a church, within 50 feet of it, and an apartment block, separated from it only by a three-foot alley.

Donovan was first seen dashing through the first floor lobby. His clothing all ablaze. A man ahead of him inadvertently slammed the outside door as he fled, and the patent catch trapped him. Ben Kaplan, a Worcester Telegram copy reader, passing by kicked in the glass, dragged the pain-crazed man through, wrapped him in his overcoat and rolled him in the wet gutter.

The bodies were recovered in their rooms about three hours after the fire started.

MAIL SABOTAGE BEING PROBED

Dern Faces Subpoena to Congress if He Rejects Invitation

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, March 3.—Sinister rumors of sabotage against the flying of the airmail by army planes flew about the ears of Secretary Dern of the war department today.

The secretary call them "fantastic and absurd," and added that he "took no stock in them." He did not deny, however, that a reported investigation into charges of sabotage—waited gasoline and tampering with army mail planes—was being made.

From all of the army's airmail zones came word that there had been no evidence of sabotage.

Dern did not say what he had heard, but unofficial reports told of punctured gas tanks, watered gasoline and plane controls that had been tampered with.

Simultaneously there came disclosure that the secretary had been given his choice of an invitation or subpoena to tell congress in person what his views on aviation are. The call for Dern to testify came from aroused members of the house military committee.

Committee members immediately charged that a letter Dern wrote to Chairman McSwain (D. S. C.) of the full committee reflected the policy of the army general staff, which, they asserted, is not in favor of aviation.

Marsilia To Sing For Mercy Chapter Early Next Month

Arrangements are being made to bring Joe Marsilia of Cleveland back to his home town early in April for a benefit recital-concert to aid the Red Cross work here.

Marsilia has started preparations for his program, which will include Cleveland artists. In a recent letter to Mrs. Helen S. Silver, head of the Red Cross committee arranging the event, he said:

"You don't know how tickled I am to be given the opportunity of singing for a Salem audience again, especially in a recital-concert. You may be sure that I'll do the very best I can. Salem folks have always been a blessed inspiration to bring out the best that's in a fellow."

"I am studying with Warred Whitney now. He is a marvelous instructor and has already helped to clear the slight obstruction which has always marred my quieter work."

"It looks like a long, hard climb to where I think I am going, but I feel as though I am not doing it alone. Of course, I have made many friends in Cleveland, but I always feel that it was Salem folks who started the ball rolling in a big, big way."

AKRON YOUTHS ACQUITTED IN STORE HOLDUP

James LaFatch and Joseph Jambol Freed by Lisbon Jury

FATE IS DEBATED FOR EIGHT HOURS

One Juror Becomes Ill, 11 Others Return Verdict

Completing deliberations extending over an eight-hour period, a jury of seven women and four men at 3 a. m. today in Lisbon returned a verdict of not guilty in the highway robbery trial of James LaFatch and Joseph Jambol, Akron youths charged with having participated in the holdup of a Salem drug store almost a year ago.

Begin Work at 6:55 P. M.

The defense rested early yesterday afternoon and, following closing arguments by the state and counsel for the defense, the jury was charged by Common Pleas Judge W. F. Jones at 6 p. m. An hour was allowed jurors for dinner and they began their deliberations at 6:55.

One of the jurors, Mrs. Belle Rickersberg of East Liverpool, was excused from duty shortly after noon yesterday because of illness and the case was continued through agreement by the prosecution and defense with 11 jurors serving.

Numerous Ballots Taken

Numerous ballots were taken before the acquittal verdict was reached. Early ballots, courthouse reports said, were six for acquittal and five for conviction, while later ballots showed a reduction in those seeking a guilty verdict until, just before a verdict was reached, the count was 10 to 1 for acquittal.

LaFatch and Jambol were charged with having been two of a group of three youths who a year ago this month held up and robbed the Peoples Drug store, East State st., of more than $80.

KILLER AND AID SEIZE MACHINE GUNS, KIDNAP DEPUTY SHERIFF

John Dillinger

GUARD BOOSTED AT LIMA JAIL

Allen County Officials on Watch as Dillinger Escapes

LIMA, O., March 3.—Immediately they were informed of the escape of John Dillinger from jail at Crown Point, Ind., Allen county officials ordered extra precautions to guard Fred Pierpont, Charles Makley and Russell Clerk, Dillinger henchmen awaiting trial for first degree murder here.

Gen. Harold Bush of the Ohio national guard, assigned by the state to help in guarding the three men, ordered extra men to duty at once, frankly saying he feared an effort would be made to free the men held here.

Pierpont, alleged "trigger man" in the killing of Sheriff Jesse Sorensen last October in a jail raid that resulted in liberating Dillinger while the gang leader was held for bank robbery, is to go on trial Tuesday.

His attorneys, Charles Long and W. M. Fogarty, left early this morning for Crown Point to take a deposition from Dillinger for use in establishing an alibi for Pierpont. They were accompanied by Prosecutor E. M. Bokkin, who planned to cross-examine Dillinger, and were on the road between here and Crown Point when word was received of Dillinger's escape.

Escape Climaxes Weeks of Planning During Which Dillinger Whittles Dummy Pistol Out of Wood in His Cell

FORCES GUARD TO OPEN CELL DOOR

Takes Machine Guns From Warden's Office, Abducts Deputy, Steals Automobile and Is Reported Headed for Chicago

BULLETIN
(By Associated Press)

PEOTONE, Ill., March 3.—John Dillinger and Herbert Youngblood, who escaped today from the county jail at Crown Point, Ind., freed Deputy Sheriff George Blunt and Edward Sager, garage employee, whom they had taken with them as hostages, here today.

CROWN POINT, Ind., March 3.—John Dillinger, notorious killer and bank robber awaiting trial for murder, walked out of the "escape-proof" Lake county jail today with a Negro prisoner—each armed with a machine gun.

Dillinger's escape from the prison, in charge of Sheriff Lillian Holley, apparently climaxed weeks of planning during which he whittled a dummy pistol out of wood in his cell.

He used the pistol today to threaten a guard and force him to unlock the first floor cell in which Dillinger and four other prisoners were locked.

Once outside the cell, Dillinger and his companion went to the warden's office, seized two machine guns, and departed with Deputy Sheriff George Blunt as a hostage.

They took Blunt to a nearby public garage, stole an automobile, and forced Edward Sager, an attendant, to accompany them. They headed north toward Gary and Chicago.

Mrs. Holley, who had declared Dillinger never would escape from her jail, immediately ordered all entrances of the jail locked and guards posted about the building. No one was allowed to enter or leave.

Three Give Up to Deputies
Dillinger forced all four of the prisoners in the cell to accompany him, but three of them willingly gave up to deputies after they reached the street.

The car in which the men escaped was a black Ford sedan.

Pushing Blunt ahead of them with the machine guns at his back, the Negro and Dillinger entered the main street garage. Three attendants were there.

The outlaw sang out: "Don't move or I will fill you full of lead." He singled out the black sedan and at the point of his ready machine gun forced Blunt into the seat with him. The Negro compelled Sager to enter the car.

Sheriff Holley, who was named to her post after her husband was killed a year ago by a mad man surrounded in a house, expressed fears for the life of Blunt. She and other officials recalled that Dillinger, the notorious John Hamilton, and other members of the gang had sworn to kill policemen on the slightest pretext.

Guards Unarmed

Guards are not allowed to carry guns in the jail itself, and Dillinger did not obtain arms today before reaching the warden's office, where he terrorized two deputies and two other jail attaches.

The Negro who accompanied Dillinger, was Herbert Youngblood, held on a charge of murder.

Dillinger was to be tried March 12 for the murder of a policeman in the robbery of a bank at East Chicago, Ind.

Sheriff Holley became hysterical when she learned Dillinger was free. She immediately telephoned police of Gary and shrieked: "Send all the police and guns you have got—Dillinger's loose."

Every available telephone in Mrs. Holley's office was manned with a deputy phoning the news of the escape to towns and cities in the vicinity.

In Chicago the police radio system flashed a report every five minutes, "John Dillinger is out and heading our way with machine guns and another man."

Capt. John Stege of Chicago police said, "Well, I predicted that this might happen. When we were down in Indiana with Dillinger, I advised the authorities to put him in the penitentiary at Michigan City."

MAN IS BURNED, HOME DESTROYED

Farm Hand in Hospital After Gasoline Blast Near Signal

A man was burned seriously in the explosion of a gasoline stove which Friday afternoon caused destruction of a farmhouse and a small tool and grain storage building on the Fairfield-Signal rd.

Loss estimated at $3,000 resulted.

John Sudey, 37, farm hand, is in the Salem city hospital suffering from burns on both hands as a result of the blast which occurred as he was preparing dinner in the kitchen of the dwelling.

Flaming gasoline was scattered over the entire room and the blaze quickly spread over the home, a frame structure, owned by John Zunick. Zunick was uninjured.

The flames extended from the house to the storage building and also caused its destruction.

Three hundred bushels of corn, other farm products and Zunick's supply of farm tools and equipment were lost.

Sudey was rushed to the Salem hospital by neighbors who also joined in attempting to fight the blaze. Lack of water and the great headway gained by the flames made their efforts in vain.

The loss, Zunick said, is only partially covered by insurance.

SPORT

Whatever the recent heavyweight fight at Miami didn't do in the way of making money or adding perfume to the savor of professional boxing, it proved that Primo Carnera, once a circus freak, is getting to be a tough customer in the ring. It may be a long time before the promoters can get a match for him that will go on at even money.

The lumbering giant, the sports writers say, has become a very acceptable boxer. Tommy Loughran, for all his years, still is given credit for being a handy man with footwork and handwork, but Carnera was able to beat him at his own game. Add superior weight, greater reach and excessive strength to boxing ability and you have a formidable combination.

The point is mentioned by way of pointing out the fallacy in one of the fire-side comforts of little men. It is their habit to soliloquize, "The bigger they are the harder they fall." They fail to follow through. They fail harder, but they are harder to make fall. There are good little men and good big men, but there are no good little men quite as good as the good big men. Somehow, true sportsmen are unable to believe that there is any sport in pitting the little ones against the big ones.

THE TARIFF POWER

President Roosevelt's decision to ask congress for the power to raise and lower tariffs may turn out to be one of the most important in his administration. It will be a direct test of congressional willingness to delegate further power to the executive.

Opposition will be based on the use that might be made of the power, not the use which President Roosevelt would make of it, according to his message. "I am requesting the congress to authorize the executive to enter into commercial agreements with foreign nations, and in pursuance thereof within carefully guarded limits to modify existing duties and import restrictions in such a way as will benefit American agriculture and industry," he said.

He pledges that "no sound and important American interest will be injuriously disturbed." In the words and important of this phrase is the issue he has chosen to join. With the tariff power reposing in the hands of the executive, there would be no guarantee other than executive discretion of protection for interests that he might deem to be "unsound" and "unimportant." Private interests would be at the mercy of one man, upon whose fallible judgment would depend their fate in a program to stimulate exports by permitting imports.

The congressional method of making tariffs, bungling and inefficient as it is in actual operation, provides a guarantee of control to those most directly affected by it. If it has seemed sometimes to be one of the weakest exercises of representative democracy, it has been also one of the most typical. The question of whether or not it should be discontinued is the question of whether or not congress shall continue to perform one of its most important duties. The future of American democracy is concerned.

The traditional and moribund tariff issue of the Democratic and Republican parties is not directly involved. President Roosevelt asks for power to raise or lower rates to fit various circumstances. Although it seems probable that the general movement would be downward in the interests of arriving at commercial agreements with other governments with goods to sell, the President has not the assurance of support from his party. He has requested a delegation of congressional power which will test the loyalty of his most enthusiastic supporters.

Two questions are foremost. First, should congress hand over its tariff-making function? Second, is it possible that President Roosevelt, in asking for it, has exaggerated the benefits of its use in his hands? The second question must be answered first. By the time a decision is reached, it seems probable that the answer to the first question would be an unequivocal "No."

THE STARS SAY

For Sunday, March 4

Sunday's horoscope is a most auspicious one for all affairs of church, state and clergy, with promise of recognition and friendly support of superiors and those in high state.

Those whose birthday it is will find themselves confronted by a year of success won by industry, application and fidelity to those in places of prominence, although this prestige and promotion may involve unexpected change, new environments and associations. It is a time to work diligently for such support and preferment.

A child born on this day should be solidly endowed for reaching high station and achievements in life.

Notable nativity: Knute Rockne, coach.

For Monday, March 5

Monday's astrological forecast must be interpreted as a rather dubious one with many vexations, annoyances and aggravations. These being of minor importance. However, any serious detriment may be obviated by the exercise of prudence, patience and tact. Be careful in employment. Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year in which their own self-restraint, prudence and wise decisions may be required to overcome difficulties, annoyances and friction. Safeguard employment from these.

A child born on this day may be inclined to petty traits of character, causing it trivial annoyances and friction in its life unless given early correction of such tendencies.

Notable nativity: Howard Pyle, artist.

O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK March 3—How small the world! On the way up to Cambodia the other week to see those astounding ruins at Angkor, Hamish and Almee McLaurin were obliged to break the journey at a border village. On the slope of a stump-pocked ravine was a jerry-built rest house.

And who should turn out to be the manager but Tom Kuma, a Siamese acrobat, bender and slide-for-life artist who had played every vaudeville circuit in the U. S. And knew Broadway and 47th street as a night clerk in a hotel back of the Palace in the Gyp-the-Blood era.

There was a night in Pittsburgh when someone was careless with a rope in his slide for life and he missed! So he became a hotel clerk, parleyed a bet at Belmont with four winners in a row and there he is again in Siam providing a little breath of Broadway along a hidden byway to the jungle.

Then in the moonlight hush, broken only by some bestial scream, he told of his first Broadway appearance. It was Hammerstein's whose out front programme was in order of appearance. Kuma topped W. C. Fields, Valeska Suratt and Elizabeth Murray. It was life's greatest disappointment to discover he wasn't a headliner.

More small world. There was the time Laura and Irvin Cobb, sailing for Marseilles, were billeted at a table with another married couple. Casual conversation developed into an exchange of addresses. They had occupied adjoining apartments on the same floor of a Riverside Drive apartment house for seven years. It further developed their respective beds were back to back on either side of the same wall. But they had never met.

Also: On a side-wheel excursion steamer paddling up the Rhine the summer of 1926 I fell in with a hardy old English colonial in the smoking room. He had been pegging down his flag in dinky far-flung outposts most his life. He had never been to the States "But some day," he said, "we may collide on your Fifth Avenue." The day before Christmas in 1932 I saw a fellow shouldering his way gingerly through the crowds in front of the library with the gentleness of big men not used to sidewalks. My friend of the Rhine steamer.

Among New York's contributions to the world's sinking fund of woe is Don Clarke, who, submitting to an agrarian impulse, has been trying to grow flowers in five and ten store-earth and the hot-house atmosphere of a penthouse garden. Something came shooting up through transplanted soil, but not roses. A cook's careless scattering of raw turnip sprouted instead. In such crazy profusion, all the earth had to be carted away.

On a swaying bus top, lines race through one's head. A fusion of poetry and prose. Her hair like gold did glister... Palermo, lero, loo!... Julius Tannen, jay walking, makes a safety isle by an eye-lash... Shall fold their tents, like the Arabs... When Chaplin comes to town he stops at the Ritz... And walk among long dappled grass... Fanny Ward, in a leather jockey cap, turns into the avenue. Isn't that Andy's wife with Clara Bell Walsh?... The harp that once through Tara's halls...

I am determined to attend no more banquets as I did at the Waldorf recently with their bravura of fictitious fellowship. Always the same exuberant talk. And forever the bore rising with the chubbiness of one thoroughly enjoying after-dinner oratory. Banquets died with Depew. They were designed for capitalists to don false beards in pretenses of altruism. I'm too permanently disillusioned by rascals to applaud such nonsense.

Something draws me to Charles Evans Hughes. I do not know the man and outside of his insurance investigations his contributions to the common weal are sketchy to me. Having so little of it, I think it is his dignity which attracts. I'm gladdened by the national vice of smart talk. Life has taught me people who do most by their kind are not backslappers and wise-crackers. They are aloof in laboratories, in a quiet study or lonely tower. Rarely are they "quaint and amusing."

Maternity Hazards

IT IS discouraging to learn that the dangers of childbirth in New York City and many other communities continue to be unnecessarily great. A recent report of the New York Academy of Medicine recommends that all prospective mothers receive adequate instruction in prenatal care. It is probable that many of the accidents of childbirth can be traced to lack of care before the birth of the baby.

What is meant by "prenatal care?" It means more than registering at a clinic or arranging with the doctor to take charge during confinement. Proper care can be expected only in those cases where the expectant mother reports to her physician as soon as pregnancy is suspected.

"Ounce of Prevention" If this is done the mother may be assured of the supervision that will prevent complications and difficulties in labor. In addition, it means repeated visits to the doctor and following his instructions in hygiene and nutrition, both so essential to an uneventful confinement.

Of greatest importance is the early discovery of any physical abnormality that may exist. It can be readily seen that when a fault is recognized during the early stages, the expectant mother will be saved many unnecessary hours of agony, suffering and perhaps something worse. In this matter certainly "an ounce of prevention is worth more than a pound of cure."

Unfortunately too many prospective mothers do not avail themselves of the offerings of modern medical science.

Diet Is Important

Though hospitals have become more popular, fatalities continue to be reported. In my opinion, many unnecessary tragedies would be avoided if the expectant mother were to receive adequate prenatal care and carefully followed a few simple rules of hygiene and diet.

During pregnancy the mother should have plain but nourishing diet. It should include plenty of milk, vegetables and fruits. These will supply the needed and increased amount of minerals. Minerals are essential to proper growth of the teeth and bones of the coming baby. Avoid overindulgence in fatty foods, and any fried and greasy food. Drink plenty of water.

The elimination should be carefully regulated and any tendency towards constipation eradicated. Keep the skin clean and active by lukewarm or cool baths, sponges and showers. Avoid hot baths, mustard footbaths and surf bathing.

I am often asked whether exercise is harmful during pregnancy. Moderate exercise, such as walking in the open air, is necessary and decidedly beneficial. Walk slowly for two hours every day. Do not walk until fatigued and, above all, refrain from sudden exertions, such as lifting or reaching up for heavy objects. Report to your doctor at regular intervals so that he may check on your health and progress.

A Review of the Day's News
By Arthur Brisbane

THURSDAY night, Primo Carnera, Italian prizefighter, heavyweight champion of the world, fought Tommy Loughran, Irishman from Philadelphia, who hoped to take Carnera's championship, and failed.

A bull fight in ancient Crete, near the Minotaur's labyrinth, with young girls 16, metal belts around their waists, literally talking the bull by the horns and vaulting over his back would have told something about Cretan civilization.

OLYMPIC games in Greece; fights of gladiators against each other and wild beasts in Rome; ancient fights with gloves made chiefly of iron, a slight blow meaning a fractured skull and death; the fighter with the net to throw over his enemy, and the three-pronged spear to stab him to death; men yelling, women shrieking, turning down their thumbs, demanding death for a fallen gladiator, would have taught something about those ancient civilizations.

Similarly, a modern bull fight in Spain, or a prize fight here, describes what those countries are pleased to call their "civilization."

Giant Carnera, six feet in height, weighed 270 pounds in the ring. Loughran weighed 184, his height 5 feet 11 1/2 inches.

Before they fought, doctors examined them to be sure that a hard blow would probably not kill one of them. They examined especially the smaller man. Lawyers served writs of garnishment, preventing payment of money to one of those interested. Ancient gladiators never had that complication.

Then after a few miserable creatures had given dull exhibitions of brutal attempts at boxing, "the main event" was produced.

SYNOPSIS

Stanley Paige, beautiful, young society girl, is left penniless when her lawyer speculates with her money and loses. Stanley, however, cares little for the money, feeling that she has everything in the love of fascinating Drew Armitage. But when Drew breaks their engagement saying it would be impossible to marry on his income, she is heartbroken. Rather than accept aid from her wealthy friends, Stanley rents an inexpensive furnished room and disappears from her exclusive circle to try and make her own way. Her friends agree that a better way would have been to marry handsome Perry Deverest, but Stanley cannot forget Drew. Then, one day, she meets John Harmon, Northrup, struggling young author. A strong friendship develops and they become very necessary to one another. John Harmon is in love with Stanley but refrains from telling her because of Drew. As times pass, his kindness and consideration win Stanley's affection and they are married. Thinking only of Stanley's happiness, John Harmon makes an agreement with her that, if the time should ever come when they cannot give each other the wonderful companionship and understanding they have now, they must end their relationship. After three months of married life, Stanley is serenely happy, but John Harmon has become so necessary to her that she realizes, in order to preserve their happiness, she must have other interests to keep her from getting restless while he is writing. She applies for work in a bookshop.

CHAPTER THIRTY

An old man in a black skullcap approached her, stared at her penetratingly from behind enormous horn-rimmed spectacles. He was little and wizened and his face had taken on the color of the yellowed pages of his books, but his eyes like the words on their printed pages, were still remarkably clear and discerning.

"I saw your card," Stanley began a bit uncertainly.

"So?" the old man continued to stare at her.

"I would like the place," Stanley spoke abruptly, feeling that with this old person words were superfluous.

"Why?" His voice, like his stare, was even and penetrating. It seemed to brush aside trivialities, to get to the heart of things.

"Because I like books, because I have a job, because I want to be known somewhere, have some—vocation."

"You like books, but do you know anything about them?"

"Not much, but I could learn. I think I could learn very easily if you would bother."

A sudden twinkle disturbed the directness of the old man's stare. Teaching people who wish to learn is never a bother; it is teaching facts that is a nuisance and a waste of time. The pay is small," he added abruptly, "and my customers are few and not interested in pretty girls," he waited, watching her impatiently.

"I would like the place," Stanley repeated, returning his gaze unwaveringly.

"Then come in the morning at nine. We will see how valuable you can make yourself to me. I am an old man. I do not like to use the step-ladder, and in the early afternoon I walk in the park."

Outside the shop, she looked for a name, found it painted on a blackboard in faded gold letters, "Felix Rose—Books."

She turned and walked swiftly southward, her eyes bright, her hands deep in her pockets. She had a job, she had John Harmon. She would be away from him all day, but she would come back to him at night. The closed door would no longer shut her out, for she would not be there to be shut out; she would be on the other side of a door herself—the door of a dim and narrow bookshop.

John Harmon quietly accepted Stanley's announcement. She told him that night after they had had dinner on a shaky card table before the fire. It was characteristic of Stanley that she didn't try to explain and characteristic of John Harmon that he didn't need an explanation. As a matter of fact, he was conscious of a rather startling feeling of relief.

If John Harmon had seemed the same to Stanley in these weeks since their marriage, it was because he had compelled himself to seem the same; if he had rumbled his hair and laughed easily and spent long hours behind a closed door, it had been because it was natural for John Harmon to rumple his hair and laugh easily with Stanley and shut himself away from her when he wanted most desperately to be with her. He had compelled himself to do just this for a long time now and a habit, when motivated by an impulse as strong as this one which shielded Stanley from the full force of his love for her, was not easily put aside.

In his marriage John Harmon had found no release from his self-imposed restraint. He felt very humble about his happiness and very responsible. There were times when he could have wept over the sweetness of this thing that had happened to him and other times when he stood in shaking fear of it. He gave Stanley just what he thought she wanted from him—and kept his passion lashed to a mast. Had he loved her less, it would have been impossible. But because he loved her so much, so terribly much, he could shut himself up in his study but he could not write.

If Stanley, waiting impatiently in the room beyond, knew restlessness, John Harmon, sitting slumped over his typewriter, knew despair. He had to write—and to write he had to lose his own identity, to become a mere automaton, an instrument of his inspiration; and just now with Stanley so near with memories of her even nearer and more demanding, he could not lose any part of himself—he could not conjure up any inspiration. No longer could he wander in a world of imagery. He was himself. He was very much alive and vital in a world of reality—a world of devastating, confusing, rapturous realities.

But because John Harmon was in love with his craft and because he was intensely in love with Stanley and because he saw in his passion for her a threatening disaster to both of these beloved objects, he stayed in the room behind the closed door and wrote aimlessly, or not at all, and wondered where it would all end.

And then, miraculously, Stanley had gone. She was away from early morning till late afternoon. Once more John Harmon was alone—alone with his paper and his ink and his inspiration. No longer was he conscious of every movement in the outer room, no longer did every minute spent at his desk require an effort, no longer was there any need to try to forget that he had only to speak to summon her. She had gone and at night she would come back to him. Until then he could forget himself, forget Stanley. Once more he found that he could write. And with the unscribable joy that only the sensitively creative can ever know he fell upon his task and lost himself in it.

He was writing for a purpose now—not just for the joy of writing, not just for the satisfaction of expressing through the written word the thoughts that cried out to be expressed, but because his writing had suddenly become a definite part of his and Stanley's life together. It was less his craft and more his job—it must earn money for him, for them. And so he went at it furiously, even feverishly, and if he lost something in depth, he gained much in breadth, for his mind seemed very keen these days and very agile. He wrote rapidly and easily and sent out an amazing number of stories to Maynard.

Maynard read them and raised an eyebrow and fed them to his ever hungry magazines. They were good stuff, they would catch on, they were exceptionally clever, not what he had thought the boy would do, of course, but then Maynard was always seeing things in people and their being disappointed he was always catching glimpses of the sort of thing he had wanted to do, before the public had caught him and broken him to her demands. He had thought that in those early stories young Northrup had sent in there had been a touch of genius, a rare quality of understanding, an awareness of beauty—in people, in nature, in the whole complicated fabric of life but if it had been there, it was gone now. But the stuff was clever and it was good magazine fodder. It was the sort of thing the public liked in big doses, and it was Maynard's job to give it to them. He sighed a bit at that relinquishing of a faint hope; and wrote John Harmon good-sized checks.

And so it happened that John Harmon's name appeared frequently in print and the problem of money was no longer vital and he gave up the proof reading and gave himself over to the finishing of his novel. Maynard had promised to look at it if he could get it into shape for spring publication.

He had rewritten the first chapters, discarding the ones started during the summer, the ones conceived while he was still in Vermont. He thought of them as immature—too idealistic. He went at them again with a surer hand—drew in his characters with a bolder touch, in these new chapters everything was intensified, the mouths of the women were more red, their beauty more decisive, his men were cleaner-cut, more virile, with fewer of the finer nuances of character. Both the men and women talked more and thought less, they moved across the pages quickly, colorfully, they did things abruptly and well and with a great deal of nonchalance and well-bred indifference, and they did a tremendous number of things—fascinating, clever things—things people would like to read about.

John Harmon was satisfied. He worked fast until for some unexplainable reason he could not work at all—the whole thing seemed to collapse on his hands. He had gone so far and he could go no further. He had no more phrases, no more situations—no more anything. The manuscript ceased to be a book and became just scrawled pages of words, and John Harmon knew despair and restlessness and ugly black depression.

But being John Harmon, he kept it to himself, until one night when suddenly for no reason at all, except that it happened, he blurted it all out. He had stayed in his study while Stanley busied herself with their supper. He had stayed there feigning work, because he dreaded to go out and pretend to a light and affectionate carelessness. But at last she called to him.

COMFORT, HYGIENE

NURSERY ESSENTIALS

FURNITURE and equipment for the nursery and playroom is altering all the time. Comfort and hygiene are now of paramount importance in the room dedicated to small children. High chairs are becoming less and less used, except for very small babies. The vogue for miniature furniture is responsible for this. Child training experts have persuaded parents that often very young children are best trained by means of their own, rather than in sitting in a high chair at the family table.

Certainly the miniature chairs with their bunnies, or flowers, or rows of wooden soldiers, forming the back, and their little side arms, must be as comfortable as they are lovely, a nice first lesson in independence for any child. The nursery furniture designed for older toddlers is essentially simple but lovely, with the decoration forming an integral part of the piece itself, rather than being superimposed. Corners in chairs, tables, chests have been reduced to a minimum.

Floor Covering

Cork linoleum with a lining between it and the floor boards is liked for nursery use, since it can be kept beautifully clean. Walls should be washable and cut-outs of animals and nursery characters in oilcloth make a very rich frieze or dado. As the children become older and the nursery grows up into a play room, these animal decorations can be removed and the children can make their own. One play room we know of, has a dado of cardboard material at one end and the children take their turn in drawing their own decorations on it. And they are surprisingly good and of course, original, since the imagination has not yet been curbed.

Toys, too, have undergone a change. Where, oh, where, is the old-fashioned rocking horse without which no nursery or play room was considered complete? Large, almost natural looking beasts of the jungle in washable oilcloth new rubber naturally on tables and built-in. These for ornament or to be taken out when the weather is nice.

For Active Play

For the development of sturdy little limbs there are now all sorts of clever contraptions. Indoor swings, see-saws, chutes, climbers, all can be found in department stores at prices that are indeed reasonable. Most of this equipment can be folded up and stored away.

Held for Ransom

To "Kid Boots," prize Boston bulldog, owned by Louis Rudginsky, Boston merchant, belongs the distinction of being the first canine honored by the attentions of kidnappers. The dog was stolen from a Chicago hotel, where he had appeared in a show. Abductors demanded $500 ransom.

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "And when he was demanded of the Pharisees, when the kingdom of God should come, he answered them and said, The kingdom of God cometh not with observation. Neither shall they say, Lo here! or lo there! for, behold, the kingdom of God is within you." (Luke 17:20, 21).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Let unselfishness, goodness, mercy, justice, health, holiness, love—the kingdom of heaven—reign within us, and sin, disease, and death will diminish until they finally disappear."

WARNING from the Chief of Police

to the Citizens and Housewives
of Salem

THIS IS A WARNING to beware of thieves posing as salesmen or solicitors seeking admittance to the home. STRANGERS SHOULD NOT BE ADMITTED UNTIL THEIR CREDENTIALS HAVE BEEN CHECKED UP AND VERIFIED THRU DEPENDABLE LOCAL FIRMS OR PERSONS.

IN MANY CASES—Strangers without reliable and verified credentials are "locaters or spotters" for professional criminals and according to police records lack of caution on the part of the householders has often resulted in costly property losses and bitter experience.

DO NOT PAY CASH IN ADVANCE — nor ISSUE A CHECK OR CASH a CHECK for Peddlers—as in many instances the customer has NEVER received anything for the cash advance payment nor has any refund been made of the initial deposit. In many cases the checks have been "altered" and later cashed by a third and innocent party.

IT'S BETTER TO BE SAFE THAN SORRY—BE SURE YOU KNOW WHO THE PEDDLER IS BEFORE ALLOWING HIM TO ENTER YOUR HOME. IT HAS BEEN A REGULAR OCCURRENCE LATELY of peddlers calling at homes in Salem selling all kinds of merchandise on the basis of "I am working my way through school and need your support." OTHERS are using the FREE GIFT selling talk to gain admittance to the homes. In case these peddlers call at your home PHONE THE POLICE AT ONCE as we are anxious to cooperate with our citizens at all times. ONE NEED NOT BE AFRAID OF OFFENDING the honest salesman representing a LOCAL FIRM as they have THEIR CREDENTIALS WITH THEM and welcome such investigation—that is why they are required to carry credentials.

Signed:

Ralph N. Stoffer
Chief of Police
Salem, Ohio.

PROTECT YOURSELF FROM "BOOTLEG" MERCHANDISE

INFERIOR "depression" merchandise is still flooding the country on the look-out for "suckers" who will buy. These goods are below a wholesome standard of quality—not worth the money or anywhere near it! Whether you order a quart of ice cream for Junior's birthday party or a brace of shirts for friend husband you cannot afford to take chances with this sub-standard merchandise.

How can you avoid being bilked on inferior goods—endangered by food-stuffs prepared in unsanitary surroundings—cheated on commodities made by children or sweated labor?

Patronize reputable merchants. Certainly, avoid buying from the door-to-door peddler you know nothing about!

When you've made it a habit to buy from reputable merchants you know about THEN you'll find yourself getting longer life, more wear, and a fuller, lasting satisfaction from all your purchases. You'll know just where to find quality. You'll be a discriminating buyer. If all women bought as carefully, the makers of inferior "sucker-bait" goods would have to quit business.

YOU surely have heard the story of the Gold Brick Artist—who sold his gold bricks to the city visitor—and in many cases "wise guys" bought them.

His methods were crude—but similar to those of the Modern Gold Brick Artist. Both of these slickers fool the public.

TODAY'S GOLD BRICK ARTIST finds it easier to prey on the Housewife who is not as well posted on the tricks of the trade. Here you find him at the door offering the bottle of silver polish—FREE. Oh yes! Absolutely Free—with ONLY ONE Requirement—that he be allowed to CALL BACK and Demonstrate the Polish—and when he returns he brings with him his Gold Bricks—the Chest of Silver, Watches, Flat Silver, etc. This STRANGER tells you all about the SAMPLES he is showing (what you receive on an order may be different) and with his Clever Manner and Glib Tongue he induces you to pay a CASH-IN-ADVANCE down-payment, which as a rule is the salesman's commission on your order.

Quakers Face Scienceville In District Tourney Semi-Finals

Salem Looks Good In Easy Win Over Chaney Five, 31-22

and a smooth-function scoring attack that had the Quakers backed against the wall much of the time, so to speak, the Salem lads came through with a momentary basket-scoring flurry in the second and third periods that left the foe far behind. It was by far Salem's best showing in the three games the team has played in the tournament.

John Pukalski opened the scoring for Salem but East came back to even the count on a field goal by Lieberman. Play was close for the rest of the quarter with the Quakers holding a one-point, 5-4, margin as the second stanza opened. Herb Brown's lads started asserting their superiority over the Youngstowners early in the second quarter but the latter team came back just as strong and for a few minutes was in front, 9 to 8.

Salem Leads, 17-11, At Half

Wayne Sidinger and Charles McCloskey, however, combined in offensive work for the Brownmen to put them in front, 17-11, as the half ended.

There was some improvement apparent in this second chapter but the real power of the Quaker five was brought to the fore in the third after Patterson and Senechysak tallied a basket and a foul to make the score 17-14. Mullins scored from the free throw stripe then Pukalski shot the leather through the hoop on a splendid side toss. Patterson scored again for the foe but McCloskey and Sidinger registered a fielder each to bring the score to 24-16.

East was destined to go scoreless for the rest of the quarter while a foul by Pukalski and fielder by Cope, who replaced Kaercher midway in the period, and McCloskey boosted Salem's advantage to 29-16. Apparently satisfied that they possessed their third consecutive tournament victory, the Brownmen drifted back into a coasting game once more and it was four minutes before either team was able to count a point in the final session. Skinger took a perfect pass from Cope to count a basket from action then Brown inserted four new players, Beck, Palmer, Zelle and Scullion, into the fracas.

This combination proved the equal of the foe until just before the closing whistle when Chaney started a desperate rally which netted it six points.

Whether the improvement of the Salem five was of such caliber as to enable it to cope successfully with the long shot marksmanship

PLAY GOLF

with

Seymour Dunn

Creator of Champions

Pressing is the ruination of more shots than all other faults put together, in fact it is the father of most faults. Pressing is putting too much body effort into the stroke. The ideal golf swing is a sweep plus a hit. The sweep comes from the downward sweep of the left arm; the hit comes from a last instant slap with the right forearm and wrist.

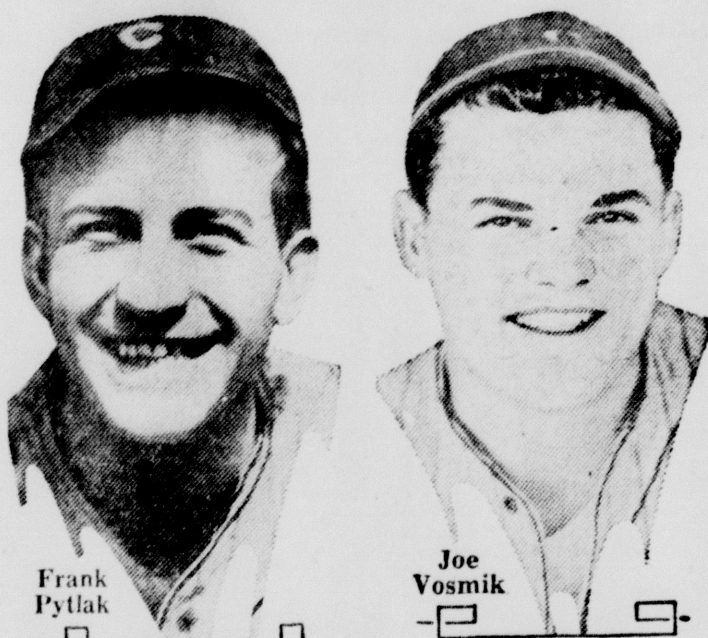

Pressing takes the form of a variety of ways, lunging at the ball with the whole body, whirling the shoulders around faster than the arms and wrists can make the club head keep pace with them; snatching the club down from the top of the swing with the arms; spasmodically contracting the abdominal muscles causing the player's head to duck so that he digs up a huge divot; spasmodically contracting the lumbar muscles in the back causing the player to bob his head up so that he tops the ball; spasmodic contraction of the leg muscles which makes him jump up on his toe thereby throwing him off balance; spasmodic contraction of the deltoid muscles causing the elbows to jerk outward and spasmodic contraction of the latissimus dorsi and serratus magnus muscles causes him to yank his arms, etc., etc.

All this sudden jerky grabbing of the various muscles come from a nervous condition. One player will be troubled with one set of muscles grabbing; another player will be troubled with a different set of muscles grabbing, but all are forms of pressing.

The remedy I offer to the afflicted seems amusing to some at first but there is really nothing amusing about it. It is highly practical and serious matter. The remedy is—whistle a continuous low, even note all the way through your swing as you stroke the ball away. The first few times you try it you will find your whistling comes to a very abrupt ending just as you are about to hit the ball.

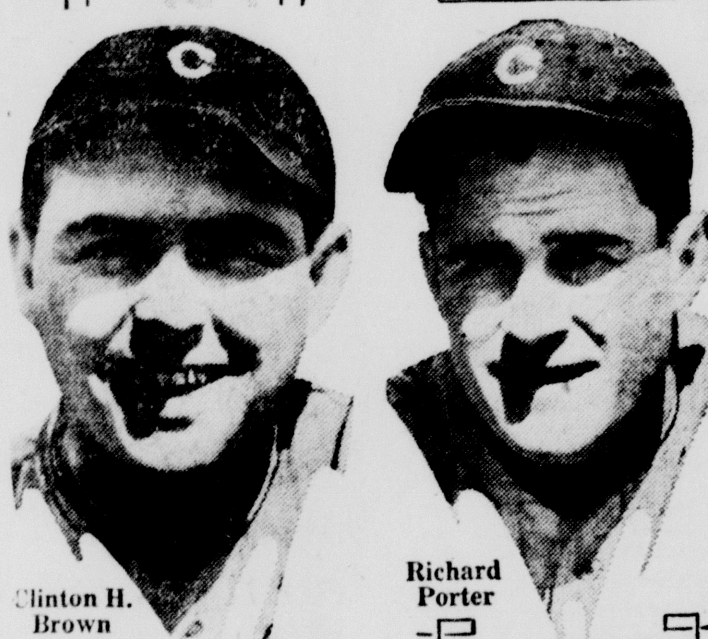

The slightest spasmodic contraction of any of your body or leg muscles will instantly shut off your whistling. You simply cannot hold that note through the stroke unless you keep all your body muscles loose. Try it and you will be convinced, practice it long enough and you will be cured.

Golfers' Attention

DENVER—The Colorado Golf association believes it has found an answer to the question of whether the state tournament should be limited to home talent, or be open to golfers from outside the state. This year, two tournaments will be held.

The first to be played on a Denver course, June 20 to 24, will be for Colorado residents only. The second, to be held on another Denver course in the week of Aug. 13, will welcome amateurs from any part of the country as state tournaments in the past have done.

BILLINGS, Mont.—Hunting coyotes with airplanes has become such a popular sport hereabouts that 22 of the animals were bagged from the air within two weeks.

Pow-wow on New "Rabbit" Ball

STAKES LIFE ON HER TESTIMONY

Dr. Wynekoop Declares Police Made Her Sign Confession

(By Associated Press)
CHICAGO, March 3.—Dr. Alice Wynekoop staked her bid for freedom—and perhaps her life—today on her calm, emphatic denial of the operating table murder of her daughter-in-law, Rheta.

Caught in what her lawyers said was a maze of circumstantial evidence, the elderly physician, weak, but still determined, put her denial into the criminal court record yesterday with a vigor that amazed the "murder fans."

Afterward in her quarters in the county jail she faintly, but was quickly revived.

"It was not my hand that held the gun," she said. "I couldn't bring myself to say it was."

With these other words, all spoken without vehemence or passion, the matriarch of the gloomy West Monroe street Wynekoop mansion, relegated Rheta's demise, as far as she was concerned, to the category of unsolved mysteries. The 63-year-old feminist leader in medicine and social work, also denied that she had chloroformed Rheta.

She charged that police and prosecutors got her to say in a signed statement that she accidentally chloroformed the girl to death and then shot her on the promise that her son, Earle, widower of the slain Rheta, would be released from custody.

JOPLIN, Mo. — Mr. and Mrs. George Washington Lankford, aged 91 and 87, respectively, just celebrated their 70th wedding anniversary. They have 171 descendants, including 41 children, 66 grand-children, 77 great-grandchildren and 20 great-great-grandchildren.

Named in Airmail Investigation

Reed Smoot

Ernest Smoot

Ernest W. Smoot, son of former Senator Reed Smoot of Utah, told the senate committee investigating airmail contracts that he was engaged as "public relations" representative in Washington for Western Air Express at a time when he was receiving $3,325 a year from the government as his father's private secretary.

Ohio State's New Grid Coach Not Afraid Of Michigan Foe

"They Pull Their Pants on, One Leg at a Time, Just as We Do," Says Schmidt of Wolverines

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, March 3.—Ohio State's new football coach, Francis A. Schmidt, isn't afraid of Michigan, the bugaboo of the Buckeyes' grid schedules.

As he prepared for a reception at the faculty club today, Schmidt grinned and commented on a query about the Wolverines.

"They put their pants on, one leg at a time, the same as we do."

He's pleased with the prospects at Ohio State, which yesterday signed him under a three-year contract to succeed Sam Willaman, who resigned to go to Western Reserve. The salary was not made known but was reported to be around $7,000.

Texas Christian university, where Schmidt coached for the last five years, looked at Schmidt's moving to Ohio State as "graduation" for him to the "big time."

Football His Hobby
Third coach at Ohio State in 21 years, Schmidt's chief hobby is football. Outside of athletics and he's interested in all sports—the movies are his recreation.

His championship records in the southwest since 1915 are an established fact, he won approval from the Ohio State Athletic board through enthusiastic endorsements.

He's going back to Fort Worth early next week to move the family back to Columbus. He'll be back in time to start spring training and to conduct Ohio State's summer coaching school.

The husky, bronzed Nebraskan has no more fears of Columbus' supposed reputation regarding football coaches than he says he has of Michigan. "They tell me this is a tough spot, but I'm firmly convinced," he said, "that Columbus and Ohio State are no worse than hundreds of other college towns."

Cantonian Slain; Killer Confesses In Quiz By Police

(By Associated Press)
HORACE, Kan., March 3.—Prosecuting Attorney Martin F. Trued said today Albert Stambaek confessed he with another man killed Clarence Dehl, Scottsdale, Pa., and John Meader, Canton, O., July 15, 1932, by knocking them unconscious and letting a train run over them.

He named Miles (Steamboat) Ware as the other man.

The decapitated bodies of the two youths, who had hitch-hiked their way to Kansas in search of work, were found in the Missouri Pacific yards here, July 16. Investigators concluded that they had fallen asleep with their heads on the rail and had been killed accidentally.

Trued said Stambaek confessed while being questioned relative to the slaying of C. C. Lavoe, locomotive engineer, in 1932.

Stambaek was quoted as saying he and Ware encountered the two youths at night in the railroad yards, engaged them in a quarrel, beat them into unconsciousness then dragged their bodies to the railroad tracks. Ware, according to the alleged confession, robbed one of the youths of a finger ring.

The parents of Dehl and Meader came here from the east and remained for a few weeks but learned nothing which indicated other than accidental deaths.

Stambaek, arrested recently in Paola, Kan., denied any connection with the slaying of Lavoe.

Officers said Ware has confessed participating in the robbery of Lavoe but named another man as the slayer.

Leaders of the 4,000 employees entered the third day of the "holiday" announced also a meeting to consider the question of demanding union recognition and acceptance of the "check off" of union dues by the company.

The picketing continued orderly, but the lines firmly refused to permit any except maintenance men to enter plants at New Kensington, Arnold and Logan's Ferry. Between 200 and 300 men are picketing.

"We want 80 cents an hour or nothing," shouted members of the crowd, who explained they now are getting from 40 to 65 cents per hour.

"Carolina," Dramatic Story Of Old South With Lionel Barrymore, Janet Gaynor As Stars, Opens Run Sunday

PICTURES for the coming week have in their casts such stellar names as Lionel Barrymore, Janet Gaynor, Robert Young, Jeanette MacDonald, Ramon Novarro, James Dunn, May Robson and Jean Parker.

"Carolina" Three Days

Beginning Sunday at the State for a run of three days is "Carolina" with Lionel Barrymore, Janet Gaynor, Richard Cromwell, Robert Young, Henrietta Crosman, Stepin Fetchit and Mona Barrie. Centering about an impoverished Southern family, "Carolina" concerns itself with the attempt of a proud family to retain its former glory. On one side are the mother, Miss Crosman, and the uncle, Barrymore, both of whom carry on with old dignity even though their credit is no longer good. On the other is the discouraged Robert Young who lets things slide desperately, and fights off his mother's suggestions that he marry a wealthy Charleston girl to save the plantation.

To disturb the family even more comes a family of northerners to plant the hated tobacco plant, and to reveal a beautiful young daughter, Miss Gaynor, Robert Young falls in love with this girl whose gallant talk stirs him to ways and means of rebuilding the plantation. But this is certainly not looked upon with favor by Miss Crosman and the two young people have a difficult time.

May Robson Stars

"You Can't Buy Everything" is the title of the film scheduled at the State for Wednesday only. May Robson, grand old lady of stage and screen, is starred in this production and Jean Parker (the Beth

Now 67 years of age, Miss Robson enacts the role of a money-mad woman financier, butting against financial giants, tussling with the fate of banks and, between Wall Street crowds, depicting her other side as the mother of a boy in love with the daughter of the man whom the woman believes has cheated her of thousands.

Jimmy Dunn and his now girl-friend, attractive Claire Trevor, who was with him in "Jimmy and Sally" are teamed in "Hold That Girl," Thursday's feature.

The story concerns a young detective who falls in love with a girl reporter while they are covering the same assignment. Their romance is one that has its ups and downs because of their quarrels about conflicting assignments. The girl makes the acquaintance of a crook—but she doesn't know that he is guilty of several crimes that Jimmy would like to get the "dope" on.

Child, 2, Sees Her Grandmother And Mother Murdered

(By Associated Press)

DALLAS, Tex., March 3.—Martha Julia Bogges, who is two years old and therefore too young to feel the pang of it—saw her mother and grandmother shot to death.

Her father, Giles S. Bogges, told the police about it last night. He and his wife had been separated since Feb. 7. Yesterday afternoon he took the baby to a relative's home, where his wife was staying, and asked her to come back to him. "I loved that baby," he said; "I had begged my wife to come back to me so that we could give the child a good home."

The wife refused. "During this time," said a statement police attributed to Bogges, "the baby had been sitting in my wife's lap. The baby got out of her lap * * *. Then I pulled out my pistol and shot her. I had been waiting for the baby to move, for I didn't want to hurt her. * * * My wife's mother picked up a stick and started toward me and I shot her."

Bogges then took the baby to the home of a nephew, where he was arrested. It was his intention to kill himself, the statement said. "But on second thought I wanted to live long enough to make sure what was going to happen to my baby girl. I wanted her raised right."
